SEASCOPE 2

Wide, gently sloping stairs lead from the aft cockpit to the flybridge third storey, which is sheltered from the elements by a bimini top. The upper helm replicates the lower station in the electronics department, there's a large sunpad next to the helm for those wishing to work on their tans and the massive U-shaped lounge will enable all to travel topside if they wish. If the flybridge sunpad gets too crowded there's another out on the foredeck.

Like the master cabin, the opulent guest's stateroom in the bow has its own ensuite, as does the twin bunk cabin to starboard opposite the galley, but this cabin's ensuite also acts as the day head. The airconditioned crew's quarters are fully self-contained with a shower and a toilet under the transom bulkhead.
